World Password Day

Don't get personal

One thing you shouldn't do is use personal information, like your birthday or place of birth or pet's name - or anything related to your organisation as this type of information is very easy to figure out, especially if they've done some research on you.

Change your password often

Create unique passwords and change them often. Don't be one of the 53% of people that reuse the same password for multiple accounts. Be sure to change joint account passwords if a team member leaves too.

Use a password manager

Use a password manager to help organise and manage all your passwords.

Remember to read reviews of any app you download.

Use a passphrase

Try using passphrases (12 or more characters) instead of passwords to instantly increase the security of your accounts.
